What is PCAP?

The Parent Child Assistance Program is a home visitation intervention program that works with women who use alcohol or drugs during pregnancy. PCAP supports mothers in the prevention of future alcohol and drug exposed births.

The main focus of the program is to assist women obtaining treatment, maintaining recovery, and resolving the complex problems associated with their substance abuses now. They ensure that children are in a safe environment and are receiving appropriate health care and effectively link families with community resources. They practice successful strategies for working with this population to prevent the risk of future drug and alcohol affected children by committing to working with mothers and their families for three years; beginning during pregnancy or 6 months postpartum. They also work with women who have a child diagnosed FASD and are still in their child bearing years and are currently using drugs or alcohol. Case managers offer regular home visits and link women and their families with comprehensive community resources to address needs in all areas of a woman's life and to help women identify personal goals and the steps necessary to achieving those goals. This program is currently offered in Wetaskiwin, Camrose, Tofield, Killam, Wainwright, Provost and greater areas. Contact Stacey Olstad @ 780-672-0257 or solstad@cafcl.org for more information
